ROLLING STONE ONLINE
Editorial focus is 95% different from the parent magazine. Occasionally CD and film reviews will be reprinted from the magazine to the online version. Features daily news and music stories, live concerts, musician profiles and limited film coverage. Unlike the magazine, it will not feature political pieces. Weekly and biweekly components such as CD review charts will be posted.

FOOD

Cookstuff profiles new products ranging from quirky and cheap to stylish and expensive. America's Best features mail-order food items from across the country. The section looks for great food that many people don't know about. Smaller operations and mom-and-pop outlets are preferred. In Season looks at reasons behind the produce prices in the supermarket. Garden Almanac is a seasonal advice section on what to plant and how to take care of a garden. Menu Planner offers ways to make a cook's life easier. Finds looks for great food locales around the city. Dish showcases a chef's recipes for use in the home. Newsbits covers funny and odd entries such as novelty cookbooks and other news. Matters of Taste alternates between food and wine.

WASHINGTONPOST.COM

The Post's online site features AP newsfeeds, all staff-written articles from the print version, a revamped metro section called "Washington World," "Entertainment Center," "WashTech" (containing the "Beltway Bootup" column and an events calendar as well as news from the print edition) and a political page featuring five original columns as well as articles from the paper. "WashTech" also has a subsection called "TechTalk/Press Alerts" where pros can post their own press releases on the site for direct access to all staffers and readers. Releases are grouped into 12 categories, ranging from internet and software to biotech and systems integrators.
